Publication: Guardian 1821-2000; Date: Jul 30, 1979; Section: None; Page: 5

Kurdish leader fears reprisal

From Reuter in Tehran

From Reuter in Tehran
The spritual leader of Iran's
3.5 million Kurds said yesday that
A said yesday that he said yesthat the Kurds should be granted self-tueThe dispatch of the Army Guards to Kurdistan is a great mistake and dispending said the peoples of Iran, the Sheikh said by phone from his headquarters in the northwestern town of Mahabad.
The government has been sending reinforcements, including armoured units, into Kurdish trouble spots since Julyman attempt to take back areas habadoned when the Shah's armed forces disintegrated in the revolution.

The sheikh sent a message to the neader of the fire the said yes he would get the test we had a said yes he would get the year of the said yes he would get the year of the said yes he would get the year of th the revolution.

The sheikh sent a message to the people of the Kurdish town of Kamyaran whe prevented a column of 13 tanks reaching the provincial capital of Kurdistan, Sanandaj, by staging a term protest on the roads.

Sheikh Ezzedin is a Sunni Moslem, like most Kurds. The majority of Iranians briving to the Shifte seat felialm, like Ayatollah Khomeini, Sheikh Ezzedin believes that the future Constitution of the Islamic Republic should clearly grant autonomy to the Kurds and other ethnic minorities.

An assembly of constitution of constitution of constitution of the constitution of the same constitution of the same constitution of constitution of constitution of constitution of the same constitution of constitution of constitution of the same constitution of const

An assembly of constitu-tional experts is to be elected on August 3, but the draft which they will have one month to approve does not mention autonomy for any of Iran's regions.

mention approve does not mention autonomy for any of Iran's regions.

The Deputy Premier Mustafa Chamran, said in an interview published at the weekend that the Government was determined to reestablish its authority in Kurdish areas with the Army's herp.

One target mentioned by Dr Chamran was the reoccupation of the military base at Mahabad. Mahabad was the capital of a short-lived Kurdish republic proclaimed under Soviet auspices at the end of the Second World War.

Kurdish guerrillas raided Marabad garrison during the February uprising and captured many weapons, some of which were reported to have been used when Kurds pinned down the 28th Iranian Division at its garrison in the Kurdishan provincial capital of in March.

The Kurds claimed to have captured more tanks earlier this month when they intercepted a military convoy trying to reopen a border post at Sore, on the Turkish frontier, to "restore law and order and prevent smuggling." Some of the Iranian troops were forced to return the surface of the restore through Turkey.

Ayatollah Khomeini received at the weekend a personal note of apology from the Chinese Communist Party's chairman Hua Gudeng for visiting Iran in the closing months of the deposed Shah's regime.

Press regorts yesterday said and Media Limited Press regorts at the content of the ayatollah on Saturday by the visiting Pakistani Foreign Minister, Agaha Shahi, who met him at Qom.

The press also reported yesterday that a team of Islamic guards in Qom. Ayatollah Khomeini's home town, will punish anyone eating in the daytime during the Mostem fasting month of Ramadan. The Tehran newspaper Bamdad said transgressors would be punished in public, but did not indicate the type of punishment.

Iranian nationals and foreign travellers may no longer take Persian carpets with them when leaving Iran, the customs department ruled yesterday. Passenger carrying carpets have been stopped at Tehran's airport lately in a drive coinciding with curbs on the export of foreign exchange.