

Four die as Iran purge continues

By David Thompson

At least 100 more of the province's second largest city, Shiraz, were killed in a second round of purges. The bodies were found in a field and scattered in the city's streets. The four generally responsible for the purges were: the province's chief of police, General Mirza, his assistant, General Mirza, his chief of staff, General Mirza, and his chief of security, General Mirza. The purges were carried out by the province's security forces, which were ordered to kill anyone who was suspected of being a member of the opposition.

The province's chief of police, General Mirza, is believed to be responsible for the purges. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls.

It was the second time that the province's chief of police had been implicated in a purge. The province's chief of police had been implicated in a purge in 1978. The province's chief of police had been implicated in a purge in 1978. The province's chief of police had been implicated in a purge in 1978. The province's chief of police had been implicated in a purge in 1978.

The province's chief of police, General Mirza, is believed to be responsible for the purges. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls.

The province's chief of police, General Mirza, is believed to be responsible for the purges. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls.

The province's chief of police, General Mirza, is believed to be responsible for the purges. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls. He was seen in the courtyard of a girls' school in Shiraz, where he was seen talking to a group of girls.

Reuter video from Washington: The United States is temporarily closing its consulates
in three Iranian cities—Tabriz, Shiraz, and Isfahan. But the Embassy in Tehran will remain open.

© Guardian News and Media Limited