Spokesman of the Foreign Ministry Hassan Qashqavi said on Monday that EU move to consider the trial of one or two European citizens in Iran as equal with trial of all Europeans is a kind of Capitulation

Speaking in a news program he described the statement issued by some European countries in this regard as illegal.

Referring to the trial of a French woman in the court, Qashqavi said the woman had a 6-month scholarship to teach French language in Isfahan University but she took part in the recent riots in Iran and sent some photos and news through her E-mail against his visa mandate.

"According to the France judicial law Iran has the authority to investigate the case," Qashqavi said.

Criticizing the West treatment in adopting double standard policies, IRI spokesman said they discuss about democracy for a country in which 85 percent of people have participated in elections but in Honduras they support the military forces who staged a coup.

Qasghqavui noted that the IRI foreign ministry was considering to balance relations with some western countries.

In the same program, Head of National Security Commission of Majlis, Alaeddin Boroujerdi said that the recent stance of the American Secretary of State over the riots in Iran showed that the country has no sufficient understanding of the Iranian society after 30 years of victory of the Islamic Revolution.
