Introduction

1. This addendum to the report of the Special Rapporteur on extrajudicial, summary or arbitrary executions describes 63 country situations and gives an account of actions undertaken by the Special Rapporteur between 13 December 1999 and 15 December 2000. It also contains in summary form the replies received from Governments to her communications, as well as observations of the Special Rapporteur where considered appropriate.

2. Owing to restrictions on the length of documents, the Special Rapporteur has been obliged to reduce considerably details of communications sent and received. As a result, requests from Governments to publish their replies in their totality could not be acceded to. For the same reason, responses from sources to requests of the Special Rapporteur, although of great importance to her work, are reflected only very briefly in the report.

SUMMARY OF CASES TRANSMITTED AND REPLIES RECEIVED

A. Countries

Albania

3. The Special Rapporteur received a reply from the Government of Albania to a previous communication concerning the death of Mr. Agron Pasha, reported in last year's report to the Commission.

4. By letter dated 11 February 2000 the Government of Albania informed the Special Rapporteur that all the facts mentioned in her communication were correct. According to the Government, referring to the medical-legal expertise, Agron Pasha's death was due to "severe injuries caused by weapons".

5. The Government reported that the relatives of the victim had submitted a complaint to the police station in Fier, which was sent immediately to the General Prosecutor's Office. Investigations were carried out by the Prosecutor's Office of Fier District, which is the responsible authority for the investigation of this case, in cooperation with the Judicial Police of the Police Commissariat of Fier. The responsible judicial authority is the Supreme Court of Fier.

6. The case was still under investigation. The Government had ordered the arrest of four persons who at the time of the murder of Agron Pasha were employees of the Fier Commissariat of Police; only one person has been detained so far.

Algeria

Communications sent

7. On 20 October 2000 the Special Rapporteur sent to the Government an allegation concerning the violation of the right to life of Abdelkader Hachani, a member of the Islamic Salvation Front, who reportedly was shot dead while he was at his dentist's office in Algiers on 22 November 2000.

Communications received

8. On 8 December 2000 the Government of Algeria transmitted information to the Special Rapporteur concerning the case of Abdelkader Hachani. The Government reported that neither Abdelkader Hachani nor his family had made a complaint about alleged death threats. A post-mortem examination was carried out at the request of the competent court, but the results were still unknown. One individual has been accused of the crime. The case is still under investigation.

Observations

9. The Special Rapporteur wishes to recall that she has indicated her interest in visiting Algeria and hopes that the Government will give positive consideration to this request.

Angola

Communications sent

10. The Special Rapporteur transmitted one allegation concerning 27 people who were reportedly killed on 11 December 1999 along the Kavango river, allegedly by government troops. It was reported that Mateus Huhwa, Kameya, Kanyanga, Lyamalilo Kanyanga, Ndumba Mawano, Kangonga Muhuli, Muyenga, Shihwaku, Joahmnes Shiyave, Kanoya Vihemba, Tjameja Muyenga, Shivava Kalimbwe, Ngondo Likolo, Ndaia Likuwa and Siyave Musenete were identified among the 27 reported killed.

Communications received

11. The Special Rapporteur regrets that at the time of the finalization of this report the Government had not replied to her communications.

Argentina

Urgent appeals

12. The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal on 31 October 2000 jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers in connection with the cases of Carlos Varela, Diego Lavado and Alejandro Acosta, lawyers practising in Mendoza who were reportedly subjected to harassment and death threats. According to the source, the threats were related to those persons' work as legal representatives in one case of disappearance and in two presumed cases of murder. According to the information received, Carlos Varela, Diego Lavado and Alejandro Acosta represent the families of an individual who has been missing since 1997 and of two persons whose dead bodies were found in July 2000, in proceedings reportedly involving members of the police. On 24 October 2000, moreover, the Mendoza offices of the aforementioned persons were reportedly broken into and various files are said to have been removed.

13. The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal on 5 December 2000 jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers and the Special Representative of the Secretary-General for human rights defenders concerning the death threats reportedly received by Matilde Bruñera, a lecturer at the National University of Rosario and a lawyer for the Association Familiares de Desaparecidos, the Permanent Assembly for Human Rights and the Association Foro Memoria y Sociedad in the province of Santa Fe, as well as by other human rights activists and lawyers working to defend human rights. The source believes that these acts were related to the activities of a number of organizations, human rights defenders and professionals promoting so-called "trials of the truth" in Rosario to establish the fate of persons who disappeared during the last military dictatorship (1976-1983) and to determine those responsible.

14. By letter dated 10 March 2000 the Government of Argentina informed the Special Rapporteur about the cases of Elvio Zanoti, Sonia Torres de Parodi and Maria Teresa Sánchez, Lawyers of the Association Abuelas de Mayo, Cordoba Section. The Special Rapporteur had sent an urgent appeal on 26 May 1999 concerning the safety of these persons. The Government informed the Special Rapporteur that the actions taken to protect the lives of Elvio Zanoti, Sonia Torres de Parodi and Maria Teresa Sánchez were as follows.

15. On 8 March 1999 the Public Prosecutor's Office took statements from Elvio Zanoti and María Teresa Sánchez. On 13 April 1999, appearing at the same Office, María Teresa Sánchez complained that a car had stopped in front of her home and had proceeded to take photographs of the house; she furthermore provided information for the identification of the vehicle, which according to the Government was traced. Regarding the complaints also made by Sonia Torres de Parodi about death threats said to have been received, the Government stated that on 23 April 1999, with a view to ensuring the informant's physical safety, an application was made to Federal Court No. 3 for 24-hour police protection to be provided to Sonia Torres de Parodi by special uniformed personnel. Concerning the threats received by Elvio Zanoti, the Government indicated that various steps had been taken to identify the author or authors and that at the time of the communication the Public Prosecutor's Office had been in the process of analysing the recordings and transcripts of tapes already requested by it from TELECOM with a view to tracing the threats.

Austria

16. By letters dated 3 and 14 March 2000 the Government of Austria replied to the communication transmitted by the Special Rapporteur in 1999 concerning Marcus Omofuma, a Nigerian citizen who died in police custody while he was being deported from Austria on 1 May 1999. The Government reported that immediately after the announcement of the death of Marcus Omofuma, the Federal Ministry of the Interior ordered a full investigation of the case and the immediate involvement of the Public Prosecutor's Office. The purpose of this measure was to establish the facts independently of the Federal Ministry of the Interior and to ensure the necessary consequences under criminal law. The Government reported that a preliminary investigation was being conducted by the Korneuburg Regional Court of the police officers involved in the case. On 7 May 1999, the Vienna Federal Police Directorate, as the superior authority of the officers carrying out the deportation, filed a disciplinary report with the Disciplinary Commission in the Federal Ministry of the Interior. In this report, the Directorate held the view, on the basis of the statement of facts, that the conduct of the officers involved in the action amounted to a violation of their general duties. The officers were immediately removed from their posts in the Aliens Police Department and assigned to the Office for Criminal Investigation, Criminal Technology and Detective Action. In addition, it suspended the officers in question on 20 May 2000 on suspicion of having violated their service duties. In view of the need for a still more intensive analysis of the human rights issue by the security police and a constant review of the police actions under the aspect of human rights, the Federal Ministry of the Interior has established a Human Rights Advisory Council in accordance with the Human Rights Advisory Council Amendment. Subsequently, the establishment of the Council was anchored in ordinary law as an amendment to the Security Police Act and safeguards were established in accordance with the relevant constitutional provisions. The Human Rights Advisory Committee is not restricted to conducting control measures and pointing out cases of administrative abuse, but may, within the scope of its activities, also make suggestions for improvement to the Federal Ministry of the Interior which include aspects concerning the performance of certain tasks as well as the organizational framework of the activities of the security police from the point of view of human rights. In a letter of 9 June 1999, the Human Rights Advisory Council was requested to examine the accusations against the security police in connection with the death of Marcus Omofuma from the point of view of human rights. The Government of Austria provided the Special Rapporteur with the recommendations made by the Council and which at the date of the letter were being reviewed by the Federal Ministry of the Interior. The Federal Ministry of the Interior has covered the cost of transferring the body of Marcus Omofuma as well as the expenditure for travel to and sojourn in Austria incurred by the family of the deceased. The Government informed the Special Rapporteur that any compensation payments beyond these amounts can only be effected after the court proceedings are concluded. By letter dated 14 March 2000 the Government of Austria fully replied to the Special Rapporteur's questions on the death of Marcus Omofuma.

Bahrain

17. By letter dated 13 April 2000, the Government of Bahrain informed the Special Rapporteur about the case of Mohamed Abdullah Hassan Mohamed Al-Sayyah, which was transmitted by the Special Rapporteur on 8 October 1998. Mohamed Abdullah Hassan Mohamed Al-Sayyah reportedly died on 30 September 1998 in Salmaya Hospital after being treated for injuries allegedly inflicted by a police officer. The Government reported that Mohamed Abdullah Hassan Mohamed Al-Sayyah was arrested on 5 April 1995 on suspicion of having, together with other persons, caused death by firebombing a police vehicle in 1995. He was subsequently charged, tried and acquitted and was released on 12 July 1995. The Government reported that Mohamed Abdullah Hassan Mohamed Al-Sayyah had been admitted to hospital on 19 August 1995, and had at that time been diagnosed with cancer. He had been readmitted to hospital several times until his cancer-related death in hospital on 30 September 1998. The Government provided the Special Rapporteur with the death certificate. According to the Government neither the death certificate nor any medical records provide any evidence whatsoever to substantiate the allegation that Mohamed Abdullah Hassan Mohamed Al-Sayyah's death was the result of mistreatment while in police custody.

Bangladesh

Communications sent

18. The Special Rapporteur transmitted one allegation to the Government of Bangladesh concerning Saiful Islam Solet, who died allegedly as a result of torture in police custody in Tongi Thana, Gazipur district.

Communications received

19. The Special Rapporteur regrets that at the time of the finalization of this report the Government had not transmitted any reply to her communications.

Bolivia

20. The Special Rapporteur transmitted four urgent appeals and one allegation to the Government of Bolivia during the period under review.

Urgent appeals

21. On 14 April 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Bolivia jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, the Special Rapporteur on freedom of opinion and expression and the Chairman-Rapporteur of the Working Group on Arbitrary Detention concerning a number of persons who, according to the information received, had been detained after taking part in demonstrations on 7 and 8 April 2000 and were at risk of being subjected to torture and ill-treatment. Those said to have been detained were: Gabriel Herbas, a member of the Foro del Medio Ambiente; Walter Antezana, head of the Central Obrera Departamental; Emilio Sejas, a heavy transport operator from Cochabamba; Ascencio Picha, leader of Trópico de Cochabamba; Felipe Quispe Huanca, head of the Federación Sindical Unica de Trabajadores Campesinos de Bolivia; Fred Nuñez, head of the Sindicato de Profesores Rurales; and Angel Clauré, Sacarias Pereira, Victor Cossio, Francisco Partis, Santiago Gareca, Víctor Nina, Enriqueta Imaca, Emilio Rodríguez, Filomeno Rivera, Felipe Flores, Osvaldo Toco, Juan Yapura and Pedro Soto. The Special Rapporteur conveyed to the Government her concern on learning that five people, including an army officer and a minor, had reportedly lost their lives during violent clashes between protestors and the military in Cochabamba and La Paz.

22. On 18 April 2000 the Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture and the Special Rapporteur on freedom of opinion and expression, sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Bolivia expressing concern about the situation of David Goitia Benito (16 years), Franz Guzmán (14 years), Noel Guzmán (12 years) and, Wilfredo Plaza (14 years), four minors reportedly detained after taking part in demonstrations. According to the information, they were tortured to obtain statements incriminating community and trade-union leaders, as well as themselves. Although reportedly now released, there are said to be still fears for their safety and liberty. In addition, according to the information, David Goitia was beaten and suffered bruises on his body and a broken nose; Franz and Noel Guzmán were held under water and beaten; Wilfredo Plaza was detained and later returned to his house; and Bartolomé Flores and Edwin Huanca were soaked with water and given electric shocks. The Special Rapporteurs also drew the Government's attention to death threats allegedly received on 13 April by Gloria Eyzaguirre and Jaime Buitrago, journalists for the Presencia daily newspaper, as well as a bomb threat in its offices. According to the information, the threats might have been prompted by the publication in the newspaper of a series of articles about clandestine gambling halls and their links with some powerful quarters, and might also have come from paramilitary groups hostile to the newspaper's editorial policy. According to the information, as of 10 April threats were received by Oswaldo Rojas, a correspondent, the photography department and editorial staff of the television station Periodistas Asociados Televisión (PAT) - Canal 39 in Cochabamba, which reportedly broadcast pictures of the crackdown on demonstrations in that city, as well as the members of the PAT television network reported to have filmed and shown the shooting of Hugo Gaza (17 years).

23. On 18 July 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture regarding the cases of Juan Carlos Caballero, Oscar Martín Serna, Ronald Alber Horna Aranda (a Peruvian national) and Carlos Albert Simoes Junior. The four were reportedly being kept in punishment and solitary confinement cells at the high security prison of San Pedro de Chonchocoro in La Paz, Bolivia. The Special Rapporteurs expressed concern in their urgent appeal about information received regarding the torture to which the said detainees might have been subjected.

24. On 6 October, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture after receiving information about the events of 18 and 28 September 2000, when hundreds of peasants are said to have blocked roads in the departments of La Paz, Santa Cruz, Cochabamba and Chuquisaca. It is reported that 40 persons were detained, 23 were injured and 3 died as a result of those events. The Special Rapporteur requested the Government to take the necessary steps to prevent any recurrence of such incidents and asked to be provided with information about investigations under way to establish the facts.

Communications sent

25. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an allegation to the Government of Bolivia relating to the case of Victor Hugo Daza, a 17-year-old student who reportedly died on 8 April 2000 after being shot in the head, according to the source, by a member of the Army's Seventh Division. The incident allegedly took place during a demonstration against an increase in water rates in the town of Cochabamba, where the army is said to have opened fire on the demonstrators.

Communications received

26. By a letter dated 13 September 2000, the Government of Bolivia conveyed information to the Special Rapporteur regarding the case of Victor Hugo Daza. According to the information received, it had not been possible to identify the perpetrator owing to the failure of any military personnel to come forward and make statements. According to the death certificate, the cause of death was a gunshot wound in the labial region of the head. The Government indicated that, although no autopsy was performed, an examination of the dead body on 25 May confirmed the cause of death. In the communication it is stated that a case was opened automatically and that the complaint from the victim's mother was made later. The case is being investigated

Brazil

27. During the period under review the Special Rapporteur transmitted six urgent appeals, one jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the question of torture, to the Government of Brazil.

Urgent appeals

28. On 1 March 2000 the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Brazil on behalf of Marcelo and Alexandre Barbosa dos Santos, both witnesses to the killing of their brother Fabio. According to reports Fabio Barbosa was shot in the back, allegedly by a military police officer as he was passing a police vehicle in São Paulo on 5 December 1999. It was brought to the attention of the Special Rapporteur that when Fabio's parents reported his killing to the civil police (responsible for investigating crimes), the police chief allegedly refused to record their complaint. They later reported the killing to the São Paulo Police Ombudsman's office and the two police officers have since been charged with homicide. It was also reported that Marcelo Barbosa, who accompanied his mother to the 22nd Military Police Battalion where she had been summoned to testify on 23 February, was reportedly approached by two policemen who allegedly told him that if anything happened to the policemen charged with his brother's murder, he should be careful because "he never knew who might be travelling in the bus he drives". In view of these allegations, the Special Rapporteur urged the Government of Brazil to take all necessary steps to ensure the safety and physical integrity of Marcelo and Alexandre Barbosa dos Santos.

29. On 22 March 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Brazil expressing her concern over the safety of members of the Macuxi and Wapixana communities in Roraima State, as well as some individuals who work directly with them. The Special Rapporteur had received reports of threats to the safety of Sirley Fatima Weber Marcelo and Edna Margarida Pitarelli, nuns from the order Servas do Espirito Santo, Jeronimo Pereira da Silva, General Coordinator of Roraima Indigenous Council (Conselho Indigena de Roraima, CIR), Jacir Jose da Souza, CIR regional leader, and Walter Blos, member of the National Indian Foundation (Fundação Nacional do Indio, FUNAI). It was reported that these persons had been harassed and threatened in connection with their involvement in campaigning for the legalization of the indigenous peoples' claim to territory in Roraima State. On 2 March, Jeronimo Pereira da Silva and Jacir Jose da Souza were allegedly stopped and threatened by a group of armed military police, who were setting up a roadblock near the community of Urucuri, São Mateus, Roraima State. On 4 March, Sirley Fatima Weber Marcelo and Edna Margarida Pitarelli, who work with Macuxi and Wapixana indigenous people, were allegedly threatened by a group of more than 30 landowners while travelling towards the indigenous territory of Ananas in the Amajari region. It was further reported that Walter Blos had received several death threats because of his professional activity within the National Indian Foundation in Boa Vista, which is responsible for the process of legalization of the Macuxi and Wapixana territorial claims.

30. On 28 May 2000, the Special Rapporteur informed the Government of Brazil about concerns expressed over the safety of Henri de Rosiers, a priest who worked as a lawyer for the Catholic human rights organization Comissão Pastoral da Terra (CPT), (Pastoral Land Commission), in Xinguara, in the south of Pará State. The Special Rapporteur had been informed of the death threats against Henri de Rosiers whose name had reportedly appeared on a death list drawn up by a death squad. It was reported that Henri de Rosiers was the prosecution lawyer in the expected trial of a local landowner accused of ordering the killing of land activist Expedito Ribeiro de Souza, President of the Sindicato de Trabalhadores Rurais (Union of Rural Workers), who died on 2 February 1991 in Rio Maria, Pará.

31. On 19 June the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Brazil concerning the safety of Eduardo Bernardes da Silva, an Amnesty International member who had received several death threats allegedly because of his work as a defender of the rights of gay and lesbian groups.

32. On 7 July 2000 the Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture, sent an urgent appeal concerning the case of Anderson Carlos Crispiano, who was reportedly arrested by a group of police officers in connection with two homicides. The Special Rapporteurs received reports that Anderson Carlos Cipriano had been severely beaten on the head, face and other parts of his body and had had four toenails torn out. He reportedly had lost consciousness and had been taken to the Bonsucesso General Hospital. As a result of the torture, he had reportedly been unable to speak, suffered from partial paralysis and had been diagnosed initially with a stroke. The Special Rapporteurs were informed that family members of Anderson Carlos Cipriano had received several death threats and that their lives may be at risk.

33. On 5 July 2000 the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Brazil concerning the death threats allegedly received on 28 June 2000 by Dionisio Vendresen, member of the Guarapuava Pastoral Land Commission. The Special Rapporteur was informed that the death threats were directly connected with his work as a human rights activist.

34. On 26 September 2000 the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Brazil referring to reports that, on 9 September 2000, Sandoval Alves de Lima, one of the leaders of a group of 78 families occupying the Fazenda Antas estate in the municipality of Sobrado, had reportedly been shot dead in the municipality of Sapé. It is alleged that the killer, who reportedly works for a local businessman with close links to the owner of the Fazenda Antas, shouted to bystanders that he had not finished and that he had a death list with five more names on it, reportedly Jose Vitor de Oliveira Neto, Antonio Epitacio da Costa, Manoel Paulo and Josenilton Carreiro de Melo. According to the information received, despite the fact that CPT had provided the authorities with a list of eyewitnesses, no action has reportedly been taken to open an investigation into the murder of Sandoval Alves de Lima.

35. By a letter dated 24 July 2000 the Government of Brazil provided information to the Special Rapporteur about the case of Fabio Barbosa dos Santos, who according to the Government died in cross-fire with members of the police when the latter ordered Fabio Barbosa dos Santos and four other individuals who were riding motorcycles, to stop. The Government stated that an investigation had been opened to clarify the facts. With regard to the death threats reportedly received by Marcelo and Alexandre Barbosa dos Santos, brothers of Fabio Barbosa dos Santos and witnesses in the case relating to his death, the Government indicated that the Chief of the Civil Police in São Paulo had made arrangements to provide for the safety and physical integrity of Marcelo and Alexandre Barbosa dos Santos.

Burundi

Urgent appeals

36. The Special Rapporteur transmitted a joint urgent appeal with the Special Rapporteur on the situation of human rights in Burundi on 30 October 2000 on behalf of Napoléon Manikariza and René Rukengamangamizi who had been sentenced to death on 18 October by the Conseil de Guerre. It was reported that the convicted were executed on 19 October 2000. It was alleged that the accused had no right to defence or appeal against the sentence.

37. The Special Rapporteur transmitted three allegations to the Government of Burundi concerning the violation of the right to life of more than 128 individuals.

38. According to the information received, more than 28 civilians were killed by soldiers on 29 September 2000 to the north of Bujumbura after a military operation in the area. More specifically, it was at Kamenge, Gasenyi and Gituro, several kilometres to the north of Bujumbura, that some massacres were reportedly perpetrated.

39. According to the information received, more than 43 civilians were killed by soldiers on 31 December 1999 to the south of Bujumbura after a military operation in the area. More specifically, it was at Kabezi, to the south of Bujumbura, that some massacres were reportedly perpetrated. Several dozen civilians, including women and children were reportedly killed.

40. According to the information received, Haruna Etungano, Pedezo Chuki, Sifa Lubanda and 57 other unidentified persons were killed by soldiers on 9 May 1999 in the village of Karamba, on the shore of Lake Tanganya, after a military operation in the area.

Communications received

41. The Special Rapporteur regrets that at the time of the finalization of this report the Government had not transmitted any reply to her communications.

Cameroon

Communications received

42. On 10 August 2000 the Government of Cameroon transmitted information concerning the case of Mr. Tchambou. The Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture, had transmitted an urgent appeal concerning the safety of Mr. Tchambou on 26 November 1999. The Government reported that the detention of Mr. Tchambou was not related to his activities as a member of the Mouvement pour la defense des droits de l'homme et des libertés (MDHL) but was due to an alleged common law infraction.

Canada

Urgent appeals

43. On 9 August 2000 the Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants, sent an urgent appeal to the Government concerning Anam Iqra, a Pakistani female citizen who has sought refugee status in Canada. According to the information received by the Special Rapporteurs, Anam Iqra's mother had been murdered by her father for not conforming to the traditional practices of her family. After her mother was murdered, Ms. Iqra had allegedly been confined and tortured by her brother. It was reported that her family threatened to kill her in case of any protest. Ms. Iqra ran away from home and was in hiding in different places, pursued by her brother and male members of her family who threatened to kill her. She was helped to escape to the United States of America from where she went to Canada. According to the information brought to the Special Rapporteur's attention, she was at risk of being deported from Canada to Pakistan. The Special Rapporteurs expressed their deep concern about her fate in Pakistan should she be deported.

Communications received

44. On 28 November 2000 the Government of Canada transmitted to the Special Rapporteur information concerning Anam Iqra. The Government reported that Anam Iqra was determined eligible to be considered as a refugee (i.e. to enter the refugee determination process) on 25 July 2000. On 7 September 2000, she obtained an employment authorization, so she could work while the refugee determination process went on. According to the Government it currently takes approximately eight months in Québec region for a hearing to be held and a decision on refugee status to be made. The Immigration and Refugee Board, which decides refugee claims, is subject to strict privacy regulations which do not allow it to provide information on refugee claims without the express permission of the applicant and/or her legal counsel. The Government reported that no decision had been made to deport Anam Iqra and that the concerns expressed by the Special Rapporteur had been transmitted to the Refugee Hearing Officer to be added to Anam Iqra's file for the purposes of the hearing. As Anam Iqra had entered Canada from the United States, the Government of Canada reported that deportation, were it to be considered, would be considered to the United States and not to Pakistan. Urgent appeals

(a) Actions carried out by paramilitary groups

Human rights activists

62. On 22 February, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia after learning that, at 7.30 a.m. on 19 February, around 20 armed and uniformed men had reportedly entered the peace community of San José de Apartadó. They are said to have broken into several premises there, killing José Ubaldo Quintero, Edgar Mario Urrego Osorio, Luis Eduardo Ciro Arestizábal, Alonso Jiménez and Albeiro Montoya. The source reported that several witnesses had identified badges belonging to the 17th Brigade on the uniforms of the paramilitaries. It is reported that members of the 17th Brigade were seen at an estate called La Guantinaja near San José de Apartadó, in the community of Caracoli shortly before the events. In this context, the Special Rapporteur referred to the urgent appeal sent to the Government of Colombia on 13 April 1999, in which she had drawn the Government's attention to the risk she saw to the lives of the inhabitants of the peace community in San Juan de Apartadó after having been informed of several operations, presumably by paramilitary groups, in the area that had reportedly caused the deaths of several persons.

63. On 27 March, the Special Rapporteur was informed of the killing on 22 March of Otoniel Bautista Mantilla and Ricardo Antonio Goes Restrepo, members of the community of displaced persons in Turbo, by members of a paramilitary group. The Special Rapporteur, through an urgent appeal, informed the Government of Colombia that two armed men had reportedly killed Otoniel Bautista Mantilla at his home, in the presence of his wife and daughter, after asking for his identity papers. Ricardo Antonio Goes Restrepo was reportedly killed by two men belonging, according to the source, to the same paramilitary group, after the funeral wake for Otoniel Bautista Mantilla. The two victims were working on the return of displaced persons from the Turbo community to their homes in the Caraica river basin, in the department of El Chocó. The community of displaced persons have been in Turbo since February 1997, when thousands of inhabitants of the department of El Chocó were forced to flee because of attacks by paramilitary groups in the area. The Special Rapporteur expressed her concern at the fact that, despite the strong military presence in the area, the displaced persons of Turbo were continuing to be threatened and their leaders killed by paramilitary groups, who were reportedly impeding the peaceful return of the displaced persons.

64. On 17 April, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia relating to death threats received by Pablo Javier Arenales, a member of the Corporación Regional de Derechos Humanos (CREDHOS) of Barrancabermeja, department of Santander. Pablo Javier Arenales had reportedly received several death threats since March 1999, when two armed men allegedly tried to kill him. According to the information received by the Special Rapporteur, Rocio Campos received several telephone calls at his home in Barrancabermeja, department of Santander, during which he was made to listen to a recording of gunshots. On other occasions the authors of the calls referred, according to the source, to Rocío's brother, Daniel Campos, who was abducted together with 30 other persons in Barrancabermeja on 16 May 1998 and whose whereabouts are unknown. According to the information received, Mónica Madero Vergel received several telephone calls in which an anonymous caller threatened her with death. It is stated that CREDHOS had on several occasions reported the presumed links between members of the army and various paramilitary groups. The source stated that the threats were directly linked to the above-mentioned reports. The Special Rapporteur drew the Government's attention to information received concerning the existence of a list allegedly distributed by a paramilitary group in the department of Santander giving the names of about 500 people, most of them human rights defenders, and accusing them of being collaborators or sympathisers with guerrilla forces and declaring them to be military targets.

67. On 26 October 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal concerning Nelson Restrepo, Ignacio Arango, Juan Carlos Muñoz, Fredy Vélez and Wilfer Bonilla, members of the Instituto Popular de Capacitación de Colombia (IPC), which had reportedly received death threats. According to the source, on 9 October 2000 the IPC offices in Medellín had received three telephone calls from persons claiming to be members of the Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC) and stating that the above-mentioned persons had been declared “military targets”. The source furthermore states that IPC was the target of two attacks in 1999. On 23 May 2000, the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers, concerning the case of the human rights lawyer Aliro Uribe Muñoz, who was working for the José Alvear Restrepo law firm in Bogotá and had been included in a list of names prepared by a paramilitary group. According to the information received, prior to the appearance of the said list, Mr. Uribe had been described as a guerrilla collaborator in a report of the Colombian Intelligence Service. It is alleged that Mr. Uribe had been subjected to continued harassment for some time, and the Special Rapporteur on the independence of judges and lawyers pointed out that he had sent a letter previously concerning his situation.

Political leaders and trade unionists

According to the information, on 5 May 2000 a pamphlet had been published giving information about a forthcoming paramilitary offensive in Bogotá and announcing the execution of several persons, including Gerardo González. In August 1999, furthermore, his name had reportedly appeared in a list of the “Ejército Rebelde Colombiano” where he was threatened with death. In previous years he had reportedly been forced to leave the region where he was living because of constant threats against both him and his family.

72. The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal on 4 October 2000 to the Government of Colombia after being informed that on 19 September 2000 an armed man had reportedly attempted to kill Ricardo Herrera, leader of the Sindicato de las Empresas Municipales de Cali (SINTRAEMCALI). As a result of this attack, Omar Noguera was reportedly killed. The source indicates that Ricardo Herrera had received repeated death threats in the past. In this context, Alexander López, another leader of the same trade union, had reportedly been obliged to leave his place of residence after alleged plans to kill him were discovered.

Peasants

73. On 10 February 2000, the Special Rapporteur was informed that members of the paramilitary group Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC) had made an incursion on 7 February into San José de Ité, department of Antioquia, where they reportedly threatened to kill the local population of La Congoja, Campo Bijao and Puerto Nuevo de Ité. As a result of the operation, some 400 people reportedly left the towns. During the AUC attack, Gabriel Castañeda and José Ignacio Suárez, farmers from the town of San José de Ité, were reportedly killed. It is also indicated that a son of José Ignacio Suárez was kidnapped by the same paramilitary group and there were fears for his life. The Special Rapporteur informed the Government of Colombia through an urgent appeal that, despite the continued reports about the danger to the inhabitants of the region and notwithstanding the substantial presence of the Colombian armed forces there, the source stated that no steps had been taken to protect the towns. In the light of these reports, the Special Rapporteur expressed her fears about the danger to the lives of the residents of La Congoja, Campo Bijao and Puerto Nuevo de Ité.

74. On 14 March, the Special Rapporteur expressed her concern to the Government of Colombia after learning that, in the morning of 5 March, a group of 150 armed men said to be members of the Autodefensas Campesinas de Córdoba y Urabá (ACCU) had reportedly forced their way into the settlement of San Luis Beltrán in the municipality of Yondó, department of Antioquia. The attackers reportedly took eight people from their homes and led them to the main square in the settlement. There, from a list they were holding, they allegedly selected seven people to be executed in the presence of their families and neighbours. Those reportedly killed included the peasants Pedro Chacón, Pastor Chacón, Juan Evangelista Chacón, Dagoberto Méndez, Leonel Pedroso Villareal, Oscar Mauricio Pedroso Villareal and Pedro Chacón Albarracín. As they withdrew, the paramilitaries reportedly took away two people. The Special Rapporteur expressed her concern over the fact that, despite continued reports about the danger facing the inhabitants of the region and notwithstanding the substantial presence of the Colombian armed forces there, the source affirmed that no steps were taken to protect the peasants in the area. In the light of these reports there are fears that the lives and physical integrity of the peasants inhabiting the area might still be at risk.

75. On 15 March, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia after being informed that, between 16 and 19 February, 350 men of the paramilitary group Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC) had reportedly made an incursion into the municipalities of Ovejas, in the departments of Sucre and El Salado, Bolívar. The paramilitaries are said to have passed through several localities, including San Pedro, Canutalito, Canutal, Flor del Monte, Bajo Grande, El Cielito, Palmarito and Cienagueta, within the jurisdiction of Ovejas, and then reportedly proceeded to the settlement of El Salado. During their passage through these localities, the paramilitaries allegedly killed 18 people in the villages of Ovejas and 36 in El Salado. The Special Rapporteur was informed that in El Salado the paramilitaries had reportedly taken a group of people to a basketball ground where, as they were drinking and singing, they allegedly tortured 36 people to death. According to the information received by the Special Rapporteur, the victims showed signs of mutilation, including shooting or stabbing, and smashing of the skull. The victims reportedly included a six-year old girl who, according to eyewitnesses, had been tied to a stake and had her head covered with a plastic bag causing death from asphyxia. The Special Rapporteur requested the Government of Colombia to take the necessary measures to avoid any recurrence of such incidents and reminded the Government of its obligations to ensure respect for the right to life.

76. On 12 April, members of the paramilitary group Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC) reportedly attacked the residents of El Tarra and Tibú, municipalities located to the north of the province of Santander, on 6 April. It is reported that, as a result of this incursion, at least 20 people were killed. The source maintains that the paramilitaries were looking for individuals whose names appeared on a list they were holding and were to be executed. Despite the continued reports about the danger facing residents in the area and notwithstanding the strong presence of the Colombian armed forces there, the source affirmed that no action was taken to prevent these regrettable incidents. In the light of these reports and referring to the communication she had sent to the Government of Colombia on 25 August, the Special Rapporteur conveyed her deepest concern about the danger to the lives of the inhabitants of the region bearing in mind that, despite the strong presence of units of the Colombian armed forces in the area, such incidents had allegedly recurred.

77. On 1 May, the Special Rapporteur jointly with the Representative of the Secretary-General on internally displaced persons sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia expressing concern about the events that had occurred between 21 and 26 April, when a group of some 400 paramilitaries had reportedly entered the settlement of Cerro Azul, in the municipality of San Pablo, in the Magdalena Medio area. The paramilitaries reportedly withdrew taking with them María Estrada, Jesús Flórez Estrada, Orlando Badilla and two other peasants. The source stated that the paramilitaries left the scene with their captives in a helicopter in the direction of San Blas. The Special Rapporteur and the Representative of the Secretary-General expressed their concern as to the whereabouts of the above-mentioned persons. As a result of the action of this paramilitary group, about 160 peasants were reportedly obliged to move to the village of San Juan Alto. The Special Rapporteur and the Representative of the Secretary-General informed the Government that the paramilitaries were, according to the source, preventing food and medicines from being delivered to that area; the displaced peasants were therefore still completely unprotected and their lives were at serious risk. The source also indicated that the paramilitaries were holding 25 peasants in the hamlet of Cerro Azul, obliging them to bring water and cook for them. The Special Rapporteur and the Representative of the Secretary-General drew the attention of the Government of Colombia to the situation of the people living around Barrancabermejo and particularly Magdalena Medio; these persons, according to the information continuing to be received, were being systematically harassed by paramilitary groups that were endangering the lives of the inhabitants of the region.

78. On 11 July 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government relating to the deaths of Rigoberto Guzmán, Elodino Rivera, Diafanor Correa, Humberto Sepúlveda, Pedro Zapata and Jaime Guzmán, who had reportedly been executed publicly, apparently in a joint operation by the army and paramilitaries. On 8 July 2000, about 20 armed and hooded men had reportedly entered La Unión, one of the 17 villages of the peace community of San José de Apartadó, in the department of Antioquía. According to the information, they had gathered the inhabitants in the centre of the village, separating the men from the women and children, and had shot those named above. Later, 63 families of La Unión had been forced to flee because of threats made against them. The Special Rapporteur was informed that a helicopter apparently belonging to the 17th Brigade had overflowed the area during the attack. Witnesses reportedly stated that five days before, a convoy of at least 100 soldiers, thought to have been from the 17th Battalion, had passed through the mountains in the direction of San José de Apartadó. According to the source, among the soldiers there had been at least two men in military clothing with no insignias. The soldiers were reportedly from the Bejaranos Battalion and the Diaz López Counter-Guerrillas Battalion. The army is said to have denied any such presence in the area. According to the information, during the attack on La Unión, soldiers, some of them in civilian clothes, had stopped and threatened peasants on the road to San José de Apartadó. Two days before the attack, soldiers had reportedly referred to the peace community as a “guerrilla community”.

79. On 12 July 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government expressing her concern about information received concerning two settlements for displaced persons in Medellín. According to the information, on 2 July 2000 a group of heavily armed men in civilian clothes reportedly identified as members of the Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC) had entered the neighbourhoods of El Pinal and La Cruz, settlements for displaced persons in Medellín, and had threatened to kill several inhabitants they considered to be guerrillas. These threats reportedly coincided with the taking of hostages by the paramilitaries in the vicinity of Medellín. On 3 July 2000, a group of youths heading towards Piedras Blancas were reportedly stopped by paramilitaries, who allegedly abducted one of them. According to information of the same date, about 11 police officers reportedly entered the neighbourhood of La Cruz in the North-Eastern Community of Medellín and harassed residents, firing shots in the air and saying that there were guerrillas in that place. According to the source, these events followed statements allegedly made by the Commander of the Army's Fourth Brigade based in Medellín, General Eduardo Herrera Vergel, to the effect that a protest from the displaced persons in late June 2000 had been prompted by FARC. The Special Rapporteur requested the Government to take all the necessary measures in accordance with the international instruments in force to protect the lives of the residents of the above-mentioned communities.

The Special Rapporteur had been informed that the threatened communities were those in the sector of La Cansonona, in Carmen de Bolivar, and in particular the villages of Caracol, San Isidro, Ojito de Venado, Mamón de Maria, Lázaro, Guamuanga and La Sierra. The Special Rapporteur expressed her concern about the above-mentioned threats and requested the Government to take the necessary steps to protect the citizens of those communities.

81. On 19 September 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia after having been informed that, according to information received, the paramilitary group Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia-Bloque Calima (AUC) had ordered the return home of a group of forcibly displaced persons who were seeking refuge in Tuluá, threatening to take action against anyone who did not leave by 15 September 2000. The source indicates that the municipality of Tuluá had provided buses for the community of displaced persons, but had apparently not taken any steps to guarantee their safety, notwithstanding the fact that the armed forces and allied paramilitary groups were still treating the displaced persons as sympathizers and collaborators with the guerrilla forces.

82. On 3 August 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia on being informed that there had been various attacks by paramilitary groups, from 15 July onwards, resulting in the deaths of the peasants Alberto Ibarra Ibarra, Juan Alonso Montoya Ortiz, Adilio de Jesús Montoya Ruíz, Luciano Urón and Willintong de Jesús Rivera Ibarra, a minor, in Carmen de Atrato, department of El Chocó. The source indicates that the paramilitaries had moved to the community of San Pablo, in Bolivar, where they had reportedly executed Teófilo Torres and his young son Darío Torres. It is stated that since this incident the paramilitaries had ill-treated and threatened the inhabitants of both towns.

83. According to the latest information received, the paramilitaries had made an incursion on 21 July 2000 into the rural area of the municipality of Santa Rosa, with the result that about 150 people had reportedly moved to the urban area of the municipality. It is stated that the paramilitaries had set up check points in various parts of the region, preventing the delivery of humanitarian aid and endangering the lives of the inhabitants of the region.

84. On 7 November 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of Colombia after learning that on 4 November 2000 the paramilitary group Autodefensas Unidas de Colombia (AUC) had reportedly made an incursion into the locality of Barrancabermeja, department of Santander. As a result of this attack, Osvaldo Buitrago Pradilla and Rodrigo Buitrago Pradillo are said to have been abducted and seven people were reportedly killed. According to the source, the army, whose New Granada battalion was located in the area, had not intervened at the time of the incursion, even though it had lasted approximately two hours. The source also claims that since 1998 the Barrancabermeja community has been the target of numerous attacks by paramilitary groups, as well as by the guerrillas.

Indigenous leaders

85. On 21 February the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal after being informed of the eviction by law enforcements officials of members of the U'wa indigenous community at the localities of Cedeño and la China, near the municipalities of Cubará (Boyaca) and Toledo (Norte de Santander), as a result of which the minors Nury Bokotà, Mauricio Díaz and Jorge Anicuta had reportedly lost their lives. The Special Rapporteur informed the Government of Colombia that since the time of the eviction, Eleonor Herrera, Luz Helena Herrera, Gustavo Delgado, Wilson Diaz, Antonio Delgado, Nelson Diaz, Edgar Diaz, Toño Delgado, Fredy Diaz, Alfredo Diaz, Wilson Herrera and another 4 minors aged between 5 and 10 had disappeared. Ríos, had been abducted by paramilitary groups in the municipality of Puerto Gaitán, in the central department of Meta. The Government stated that the cause of the latter's death was bronchial pneumonia, as the death certificate, which the Government claims is based on the results of the autopsy conducted on 4 February 2000, clearly stated. The Government reports that the autopsy revealed no external signs of violence of a surgical or other nature, and that an internal examination showed that both lungs were larger than normal and filled with bloody, purulent fluid, which corroborates, according to the Government, the clinical and radiological diagnosis of bronchial pneumonia of unspecified origin. The Government reports that the military prosecutor's office in Colón, Matanzas Province, was aware of the incident and conducted an appropriate investigation. According to the Government's information, Juan Carlos Carrillo Martínez had reported to the prison clinic on 31 January 2000 with frequent diarrhoea, with mucus and blood, and a lack of appetite. During a physical examination he experienced only slight pain when his epigastrium was palpated; no other symptoms were present, and he was treated with oral rehydration salts and metronidazole. The Government states that Juan Carlos Carrillo Martínez subsequently reported back to the clinic complaining of lethargy, muscular weakness and lack of appetite, whereupon it was decided to admit him for observation and treatment. On 2 February he was transferred to Colón Municipal Hospital, where it was determined that he suffered from acute pneumonia, and he was given appropriate medical treatment. The patient died at 11.30 p.m. on 3 February 2000. As a result of the investigation, the military prosecutor's office in Colón concluded that there had been no criminal acts associated with the death of Juan Carlos Carrillo Martínez. According to the Government, no complaints were filed in the matter. At the request of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Office of the Attorney-General conducted an investigation of the incident which confirmed the results of the investigation conducted by the military prosecutor's office in Colón. The Government maintains that the investigation included interviews with the cell-mates of Juan Carlos Carrillo Martínez. The Government further maintains that all those interviewed agreed that neither the corrections officers nor the other prisoners beat Juan Carlos Carrillo Martínez at any time.

The Government reports that Liván González Larrude had escaped from the police onto a roof from which he fell to the ground without any intervention on the part of the police. The Government states that these events were confirmed by members of the provincial police and by the military prosecutor's office. According to the Government, some 14 witnesses corroborated these events, and the experts who conducted the autopsy concluded that death was violent and its causes were consistent with the information provided about the fall from the roof. The Government states that on 9 February 2000 a complaint was filed with police station No. 22 in Arrollo Naranjo, and that Liván González Larrude was found in the street in a weakened state and subsequently taken by the police to the Julián Grimau Clinic, where he was treated by the doctor on duty, who personally took him in an ambulance to the emergency room of the Julio Trigo Hospital. Some hours later, Mr. González Larrude was transferred to the Miguel Enríquez Hospital, when it was determined that his head required surgical attention. Because the patient's post-operative condition was diagnosed as serious, he was taken to the Hermanos Ameijeiras Hospital, which the Government says is one of the country's best hospitals and has the most modern equipment. It was in this hospital that Liván González Larrude died.

On 1 August 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent the Government an urgent appeal in connection with the situation of Marco Antonio Abadicio Mayo, a member of the Sierra del Sur Peasant Organization (OCSS), who was allegedly shot and seriously wounded on 21 July 2000, by a group of unidentified persons, while in the community of Atoyaquillo, municipality of Coyuca de Benítez. The source states that despite the lodging of complaints, the competent authorities have apparently not opened any investigations. According to the information provided by the source, Marco Antonio Abadicio Mayo had previously lodged a complaint alleging that he had been threatened and beaten on 12 January 2000 by a group of police officers on the outskirts of the Pueblo Viejo community.

274. The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture on 13 July 2000 after learning that Benito Almaraz Enríquez, Jordán Almaraz Silva, Arnulfo Almaraz Valencia, Eleno Hernández Almaraz, Genaro López Ruiz, José Pacheco Contreras, Guillermo Pacheco Pacheco and Silvano Pacheco Pacheco and Agustín Pacheco Hernández, of the Loxicha region, Oaxaca State, had allegedly been sentenced to 40 years’ imprisonment on 7 July 2000, following an apparently unfair trial which involved confessions made under torture. According to the information, since August 1996 more than 130 indigenous zapotecos have been detained and charged with membership in the armed opposition group Ejército Popular Revolucionaria (EPR). The latest arrests allegedly occurred on 25 May 2000 and, according to the source, blows and threats were used and no judicial warrant produced. The above-mentioned individuals were allegedly detained unofficially for five or six days, during which time they were beaten, tortured with electric shocks, threatened with death and forced to sign false confessions. Only 25 of the 60 originally detained have been sentenced, on charges such as terrorism, conspiracy, attempted homicide and keeping firearms. Another 47 were reportedly released, but some of them did not return to their homes for fear of further abuse. According to the information, despite complaints lodged with both the Public Prosecutor’s Office and the Human Rights Commission, it would appear that no investigations are being conducted into the charges of torture, ill-treatment and other irregularities, statements having been taken from persons who do not speak Spanish with no provision of translators. The detainees’ relatives have allegedly suffered intimidation and harassment since the detentions and some have left their homes in order to ensure their safety. Israel Ochoa Lara, defense counsel for the Loxicha prisoners, was allegedly also subjected to harassment.

281. On 30 August 1997, the body of Rubén Calderón Esquer, publisher of the newspaper "La Montaña de Nuevo Laredo" Tamaulipas, was found in a ditch at the side of the Monterrey-Nuevo Laredo road. The accused appealed the sentence, however, and a second court issued a judgement on 25 June 1999 altering the previous decision. The Government stated that a complaint was lodged with the Investigating Public Prosecutor of the Ordinary Court of the Judicial District of Teniente Jose Azueta, in Zihuatanejo, Guerrero, the body responsible for conducting the investigation. On the basis of a preliminary investigation criminal proceedings were opened against four persons (whom the Government identifies in its reply). The persons concerned were acquitted by the judge in charge of the case in his final judgement, who decided that they were not guilty or criminally responsible for aggravated homicide; the decision was appealed. Criminal proceedings remained open in respect of the other three accused persons (whom the Government identifies in its reply), against whom an arrest warrant was issued, for the offence of aggravated homicide committed against Pedro Valle, but which it has not been possible to carry out. United Arab Emirates

381. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal on 9 March 2000 jointly with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women and the Special Rapporteur on the human rights of migrants concerning the case of Karteen Karikender, aged 35, an Indonesian migrant worker in the United Arab Emirates. According to information received, Ms. Karikender took a job as a domestic helper in the city of Fujairah in February 1998.

382. In 1999, she became pregnant and her employers accused her of adultery. She was handed over to the local authorities and delivered her baby while in detention. In 2000 she was summoned to face trial at the Syariah Fujairah Municipal Court, reportedly without any legal assistance and unattended by a translator/interpreter during the proceedings. The court found her guilty of adultery and sentenced her to death by stoning. The same court was said to have recently sentenced a Cypriot man convicted of battering his wife to death with a rock to four years in jail and 70 lashes. According to reports, the man responsible for the pregnancy was an Indian citizen who had disappeared without a trace and whom the court acquitted in absentia. The case was reportedly going to be appealed to a higher court in Fujairah. If her sentence is upheld on appeal the case may be referred to the Federal Supreme Court in Abu Dhabi and afterwards to the President for ratification. The Indonesian Embassy to the United Arab Emirates had reportedly not been notified about the trial and only became aware of the case when the local media announced the death penalty nationwide. Article 36 of the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations recognizes the right to communicate with and receive assistance from one's own consular representatives. The alleged failure to inform the defendant of this right may have deprived her of important assistance in the preparation of her defence. The Special Rapporteurs expressed their concern at the fact that in 1997 six people, including one woman, were executed for murder. In 1998 one person, a Pakistani national, was executed after having been convicted of murder and in 1999 two people, a Pakistani national and a Sri Lankan national, were also executed for murder.

Communications received

383. The Government of the United Arab Emirates transmitted information on 14 April and 8 May 2000 to the Special Rapporteur concerning the case of Karteen Karikender. On 8 May 2000 the Government informed the Special Rapporteur that after Ms. Karikender's lawyer lodged an appeal against the sentence passed on his client, the penalty of stoning had been commuted to a term of one year's imprisonment and expulsion from the country after serving the sentence. The Court of Appeal based its judgement, in which it set aside the legally stipulated penalty of stoning for adultery, on the accused person's withdrawal of her confession to the crime of adultery, made during the investigation and trial before the court of first instance and retracted before the Court of Appeal.

Observations

384. The Special Rapporteur welcomed the decision of the court to release Karteen Karikender. On 10 May the Special Rapporteur was informed by the source that the appeals court in the United Arab Emirates had commuted her "death by stoning" sentence, and that she had been reunited with her husband and two sons in Indonesia.

United States of America

385. The Special Rapporteur transmitted 11 urgent appeals concerning the following persons who were sentenced to death.

386. The Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, transmitted an urgent appeal to the Government of the United States and a letter to the Governor of Texas on behalf of Betty Lou Beets who was reportedly scheduled to be executed on 24 February 2000. She had been sentenced to death in 1985 for the murder of her husband. The Special Rapporteurs were told that at Ms. Beets's trial crucial mitigating evidence, including her history of severe physical, sexual and emotional abuse from an early age, was never presented to the jury. Despite the appeals Betty Lou Beets was executed in Texas on the scheduled date.

387. On 5 May 2000 the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal to the Government of the United States on behalf of Mark Lankford, sentenced to death in Idaho on 16 October 1984. Mark Henry Lankford and his brother Bryan were charged with the murders of two people during a robbery in 1983. It was reported that Bryan Lankford, who was tried first and convicted in March 1984, agreed to testify against his brother. It had been brought to the Special Rapporteur's attention that without Bryan Lankford's testimony, there was no evidence that Mark had participated in killing the victims. It was also reported that the prosecutor acknowledged that the case against Mark was weak without Bryan's testimony. According to the information received, Mark had always admitted that he assisted his brother after the killings, but that he had no prior knowledge that Bryan was going to kill the victims and he had had nothing to do with the murders. It is reported that Mark Lankford did not testify at his trial. He did, however, testify at his sentencing when he denied having killed the two victims. It is also reported that Bryan, who, at the beginning of the process, accused Mark of committing the murders, later recanted and stated that he alone was responsible for the killings. In April 1999, while waiting resentencing, Bryan again affirmed in a letter presented to his sentencing judge that he alone was responsible for the killing. The Special Rapporteur is awaiting a reply from the Government.

388. On 2 June 2000 the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal to the Government of the United States concerning the imminent execution in Alabama of Pernell Ford, who reportedly had a long history of serious mental disturbance.

The Special Rapporteur had sent an urgent appeal concerning the same case on 10 October 1999. Thomas Provenzano was diagnosed with paranoid personality disorder and paranoid schizophrenia.

390. On 13 June 2000 the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal concerning the case of Shaka Sankofa (Gary Graham) who was scheduled to be executed in Texas on 22 June 2000. The Special Rapporteur had also sent an urgent appeal on 1 January 1999. Mr. Sankofa was reportedly sentenced to death for a crime committed when he was 17 years of age.

391. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal on 16 August 2000 concerning the case of Alexander Edmund Williams who was scheduled to be executed in Georgia on 24 August 2000. Alexander Edmund Williams was reportedly sentenced to death for a crime committed when he was 17 years of age. He had remained on death row for 14 years, since his conviction in August 1986. It was also reported that Alexander Edmund Williams suffered from serious mental illness. According to the information received, his lawyer failed to present evidence to that effect at his trial. It had been brought to the attention of the Special Rapporteur that Mr. Williams's lawyer reportedly failed to investigate his client's background. As a result, the jury was unaware of the severe physical and mental abuse that Mr. Williams had been subjected to as a child at the hands of various adults and the signs of mental illness he had displayed before the crime.

392. On 12 September 2000 the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal on behalf of Derek Rocco Barnabei who was scheduled to be executed in Virginia on 14 September 2000. He was sentenced to death in 1995 for the rape and murder of 17-year-old university student Sarah Wisnosky in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1993. It is reported that material from Mr. Barnabei's case file, including biological evidence, went missing on 30 August 2000. The evidence was reportedly found on 1 September 2000 in the Norfolk Circuit Court office in a different room from where it had disappeared. There were concerns that this material may have been tampered with and thereby compromised while it was missing.

393. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal concerning the case of Bobby Lee Ramdass, who was scheduled to be executed in Virginia on 10 October 2000. He was sentenced to death in 1993 for the murder of Mohammed Kayani during the robbery of a store in Fairfax County, Virginia, on 2 September 1992. He was previously convicted twice of robbery at two trials in January 1992, for which he received prison terms. It was reported that at his third trial, the prosecution used Mr. Ramdass's involvement in these and other crimes to argue that he was a future danger to society and should be executed. The Special Rapporteur was informed that under Virginia's then "three-strikes law", a person convicted of three separate crimes of murder, rape or armed robbery became ineligible for parole. It was reported that during the deliberations of the case in January 1993, the jury asked the judge whether Mr. Ramdass would be eligible for parole at any time in the event he was sentenced to life imprisonment. Reportedly, the judge did not answer the question, but advised the jurors to decide the case according to the evidence they had. In this connection, the Special Rapporteur noted that in 1994, the United States Supreme Court ruled, in Simmons v. South Carolina, that where a defendant's future dangerousness is at issue and State law prohibits his release on parole, due process requires that the sentencing jury be informed that the defendant is parole ineligible. In 1998, a federal judge, citing Simmons v. South Carolina, ordered a new sentencing hearing. On 23 November 1999, the Supreme Court stopped Mr. Ramdass's execution three hours before it was due in order to examine his Simmons v. South Carolina claim. On 12 June 2000, it upheld the sentence. Four of the nine justices dissented, describing as an "acute unfairness" the fact that the State had been allowed to use the second conviction to argue Mr. Ramdass's future dangerousness while denying the defence the opportunity to argue that conviction made him ineligible for parole. In view of all these considerations, the Special Rapporteur was concerned that due process requirements may have been compromised in the trial leading to Mr. Ramdass's death sentence.

394. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal on 12 October 2000 concerning the case of Zolo Agona Azania, a black political activist and journalist who was scheduled to be executed in Indiana on 25 October 2000. He was sentenced to death in 1981 for the murder of a policeman in Gary, Indiana. It appears that a critical witness at his earlier trial perjured himself at the behest of the prosecution and that black jurors were not allowed to sit on the jury.

395. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal on 6 November 2000 concerning the case of Miguel Angel Flores, a Mexican national who was scheduled to be executed in Texas on 9 November 2000. Mr. Flores was reportedly sentenced to death for the abduction, rape and murder in 1989 of Angela Tyson. According to the information received, Mr. Flores was not informed of his right to communicate with the Mexican consulate. It is further reported that the Government of Mexico did not learn of his detention until one year after he was tried, convicted and sentenced to death.

396. On 15 November 2000 the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal concerning the case of James Chambers who was scheduled to be executed in Missouri on 15 November 2000. Mr. Chambers was reportedly sentenced to death for shooting a man to death after a fight in 1982. It was reported that he was sentenced following his conviction in a third trial and that the two previous trials had been declared unconstitutional. It was further reported that James Chambers has low mental ability, a fact which was not presented to the jury at the sentencing phase of the trial.

397. The Government replied to all of the Special Rapporteur's communications during the period under review. In its replies, the Government detailed the legal safeguards for defendants in criminal cases and specifically cases in which the death penalty applies. The replies received were in response to cases concerning the following individuals: Christopher Thomas, Steve Edward Roach and Glen McGinnis (10 January 2000), Betty Lou Beets (23 February 2000), Joseph Stanley Faulder (14 March 2000), Charles Foster (23 May 2000), Shaka Sankofa (Gary Graham) (19 June 2000), Thomas Provenzano (21 June 2000), Pernel Ford (15 August 2000), Mark Henry Lankford (18 August 2000), Alexander Williams (30 August 2000), Bobby Lee Ramdass (6 October 2000), Zolo Angona Azania (24 October 2000) and Miguel Angel Flores (5 December 2000).

398. Concerning the execution of Christopher Thomas, Steve Edward Roach and Glen McGinnis, who reportedly committed grave offences when they were minors, the Government transmitted to the Special Rapporteur a copy of a letter addressed to the Human Rights Committee concerning this particular issue. The Government stated that the United States has consistently taken the position that the execution of juvenile offenders is not inconsistent with international law.

399. In the case of Betty Lou Beets, the Special Rapporteur expressed her concern at the fact that mitigating evidence of Betty Lou Beets's history of severe physical, sexual and emotional abuse was not taken into account when she was convicted and sentenced for murder. The Government informed the Special Rapporteur that even if she had had the opportunity to raise the defence of "battered women's syndrome" in mitigation of the charges against her, neither Betty Lou Beets nor her lawyer chose to present evidence of past beatings at the trial. According to the information provided by the Government, the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals stated that "a jury that had already determined that Betty Lou Beets murdered her husband in a calculated effort to profit from his death would not have been sympathetic to the impression fostered by mitigating evidence that Betty Lou Beets could not control herself".

400. The Government reported that the United States Supreme Court on 25 January 1999 issued a decision that it would not review the case of Joseph Stanley Faulder and that the Texas state authorities were then free to reschedule the execution, although Mr. Faulder could also undertake additional efforts to prevent it. Joseph Stanley Faulder was executed on 17 June 1999 after his final efforts to obtain judicial remedies and commutation of sentence were unsuccessful. The Government reported that Mr. Faulder was not told, as he should have been, of his right to request the assistance of a Canadian consular official. In addition, his name did not appear on a list of Canadian prisoners provided to Canadian officials by the State of Texas. The Government believed that the Canadian officials would have offered Mr. Faulder consular assistance if his name had been on one of the lists. According to the Government, the rights to consular notification are not individual rights and the failure of notification does not give rise to any legal right to relief in a criminal proceeding. The Secretary of State had asked the Texas Board of Pardon and Paroles to give careful consideration to the consular aspects of his case; however, the Board decided against recommending clemency.

401. The Government informed the Special Rapporteur about the issue of Charles Foster's mental impairment, that he had had many opportunities during the judicial proceedings to raise the issue and that he had indeed done so. The issue was first addressed prior to the trial itself when Mr. Foster was examined by professionals at Eastern State Hospital to determine whether or not he was competent to stand trial. These professionals concluded that he was capable of understanding the proceedings against him and that he had the ability to assist his attorney in his defence. The issue of Mr. Foster's mental impairment was reviewed during his habeas corpus petition to the United States District Court when he introduced an affidavit from a physician, which stated that his IQ was 68 and that he could not have assisted his attorney in his defence. The Oklahoma Pardon and Parole Board considered his appeal for clemency and expressed no concern that he was so mentally impaired that he could not understand the proceedings against him.

402. The Government reported that Shaka Sankofa was arrested on 20 May 1981, tried and found guilty of the capital murder of Bobby Lambert at a parking lot in Houston, Texas. His conviction was based on eyewitness testimony. According to the Government, Mr. Sankofa has availed himself of his due process rights under both state and federal law. In 1993, pursuant to a second request by Mr. Sankofa for a state writ of habeas corpus, Mr. Sankofa also presented an affidavit from a former employee who was gathering shopping carts in the parking lot several minutes before the shooting and had noticed the gunman standing just outside the store. In his opinion, Shaka Sankofa was not the killer. However, the court ruled that the employee did not witness the actual shooting and that his affidavit did not undermine the testimony and identification made by the eyewitness. Concerning the fact that Shaka Sankofa was a juvenile when he allegedly committed the crime, the Government stated that United States practice regarding execution of juvenile offenders is consistent with international law. The United States has never undertaken a treaty obligation prohibiting capital punishment of persons who committed offences before they were 18 years of age. Indeed, the United States has consistently made reservations to treaty provisions concerning capital punishment practice. Regarding the recommendations contained in the Beijing Rules and the Safeguards guaranteeing protection of the rights of those facing the death penalty, customary international law also does not prohibit the execution of persons who were 16 or 17 at the time of the crime when they are judged competent to be tried as adults. The Government noted that on 1 June 2000 Shaka Sankofa filed a clemency/reprieve request with the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

403. On the Thomas Provenzano case, the Government reported that Governor Bush of Florida appointed a three-member commission of psychiatrists based on Thomas Provenzano's claim that he was not competent to face execution. On the basis of their report, the Circuit Court determined that Mr. Provenzano was competent to be executed. The Circuit Court's decision was appealed to the Florida State Supreme Court which in May 2000 affirmed the decision. Although both the Circuit Court and the Florida State Supreme Court acknowledged that there was evidence that Mr. Provenzano had mental health problems to some degree, both courts agreed that he was aware of the punishment he was about to suffer and why he was about to suffer it. Based on the decision by the Florida State Court, Thomas Provenzano's execution date was set for 20 June 2000.

404. On the Pernell Ford case, the Government reported that the convicted man filed on 30 May 2000 a motion to dismiss his habeas corpus petition, claiming that he wanted to be executed. Mr. Ford also dismissed his lawyer at that time. Given his history of mental illness, the court would not agree to his request without a psychiatric evaluation. A psychiatrist examined Mr. Ford on two occasions. According to the Government, the psychiatrist stated that Pernell Ford was competent to dismiss his lawyer and his habeas corpus petition. The District Court granted Mr. Ford's requests. In July 1999, the decision was reviewed by the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, which affirmed the decision of the lower court. On 2 June 2000 Pernell Ford was executed.

405. Concerning the case of Mark Henry Lankford, the Government informed the Special Rapporteur that according to the Attorney-General of the State of Idaho, Mark Henry Lankford had two appeals pending; the first before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals where the parties were awaiting the date for oral argument; and the second before the Idaho Supreme Court on a successive post-conviction petition. Regarding the question of the recantation of Mr. Lankford's brother, mentioned by the Special Rapporteur in her urgent appeal, the Idaho Supreme Court concluded that the recantation would not have produced a different verdict, as there was additional physical evidence of Mark Henry Lankford's culpability in the murders.

406. According to the information received from the Government, Alexander Williams was granted an indefinite stay of execution on 22 August 2000 by the Georgia Supreme Court.

407. In the case of Bobby Lee Ramdass, it had been reported that due process may have been compromised in the trial because the sentencing jury was not informed that Mr. Ramdass would have been ineligible for parole. In its reply, the Government confirmed that this was indeed the case. However, the Government stated that the basis for the Supreme Court's decision was that at the time of the sentencing, Mr. Ramdass was not yet parole eligible. Under Virginia law a person convicted of three separate felony offences of murder, rape or armed robbery, not part of a common act, is ineligible for parole. Further, under Virginia law, a conviction does not become final until the jury returns a verdict and, some time thereafter, the judge enters a final judgement conviction. According to the Government, extending the law to cover situations where a defendant might be parole ineligible is neither constitutionally required nor practically workable. There was therefore no denial of due process in this case.

408. The Government reported that at the 1996 sentencing hearing of Zolo Agona Azania, a witness told the court that his testimony at Mr. Azania's initial 1982 trial was false. The witness stated that before he took the stand for the prosecution in that trial, he informed a police officer that he could not identify the defendant and that someone had advised him where the defendant would be sitting in the courtroom. According to the Government, despite this admission the evidence against Mr. Azania was still strong enough to result in a second sentence of death. At the 1996 sentencing hearing the witness did not present any identification testimony and therefore his identification of Zolo Agona Azania was not an issue. With regard to the charge that no Blacks were allowed to sit on the jury, Mr. Azania had raised the issue in the federal court proceedings. The trial judge held a hearing at which Mr. Azania was asked to show that the disallowing of Blacks was likely to occur. Mr. Azania was unable to make such a showing, but said that he had reason to believe that the State would do so. Mr. Azania in his first appeal raised the claim that the jury pool in the original trial included a disproportionately small number of minority members. However, under Indiana law, this alone was insufficient to show prejudice. According to the Government, to show reversible error it must be demonstrated that under-representation is due to a systematic exclusion of the group from the jury selection process.

409. On 5 December 2000 the Government of the United States transmitted a reply to the Special Rapporteur on the case of Miguel Angel Flores. The Department of State noted that despite the fact that Mexican consular authorities became aware of Miguel Angel Flores's case in 1991, after he was sentenced the trial before the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals was completed in 1993. The Department noted further that the questions about mitigating evidence, competence of representation and competence of prosecution witnesses were all addressed in the courts in the process of Mr. Flores's appeals. The Department understood that Mr. Flores had specifically prohibited his attorney from having his family members, many of whom lived in the United States, testify on his behalf; that counsel for Mr. Flores not only cross-examined the State's psychiatric witness but also presented his own expert to testify; and that Mr. Flores spoke English and had lived in the United States since he was three or four years old. The Department informed the Special Rapporteur that it had seen no evidence that Mexican consular assistance would have affected the proceedings given the above-mentioned facts. The Government stated that the United States takes seriously its obligations to advise foreign nationals of their right under the Vienna Convention on Consular Relations. The Department of State regretted this failure and apologized to the Government of Mexico.

Uzbekistan

410. On 30 June 2000, The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent action jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture concerning the case of Dmitry Chikunov who was convicted of the premeditated murder of two men and sentenced to death on 11 November 1999 by the Tashkent Regional Court. The Supreme Court of Uzbekistan reportedly turned down his appeal against his death sentence on 24 January 2000. It is alleged that while Mr. Chikunov was in pre-trial detention, law enforcement agents tortured him during interrogation and threatened to rape his mother unless he confessed to the crime he was accused of.

411. On 12 July 2000, the Special Rapporteur, jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture, sent an urgent action to the Government of Uzbekistan concerning Oybek Ruzmetov, a 35-year-old man, his 30-year-old brother, Uygun Ruzmetov, Sardor Allayarov, a 28-year-old man, and Utkir Yusupov, a 26-year-old man, who reportedly were facing imminent execution after the Supreme Court rejected appeals against their death sentences. Oybek and Uygun Ruzmetov were arrested in December 1998 after police searched their house, in the town of Urgench in western Uzbekistan, and allegedly planted cartridges in Oybek Ruzmetov's room. He was later accused of being the head of an illegal group. The two brothers were said to have been held at the Urgench National Security Services, where a confession was said to have been extracted from them under torture. In February 1999, the police were said to have arrested the men's parents, forced them to undress down to their underwear and show themselves in handcuffs to their sons. The police are further said to have threatened to rape Uygun Ruzmetov's wife unless they confessed. The four above-mentioned persons and Shikhnozov Yakubov, a 25-year-old man, were convicted of planning to blow up a water reservoir, attempting to overthrow the constitutional order to set up an Islamic State, organizing illegal armed groups, premeditated aggravated murder, and robbery and sentenced to death by the Tashkent Regional Court in July 1999. Shikhnozov Yakubov reportedly died as a result of beatings in prison in October 1999.

412. On 8 August 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent action jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture concerning the case of Rafael Mubarakshin, a student at Tashkent Aviation Institute, who was convicted of the premeditated murder of another student and sentenced to death in December 1999 by the Tashkent Regional Court. The Supreme Court reportedly rejected his appeal on 14 February. According to the information his lawyer was not present when the Supreme Court rejected his appeal, allegedly because he had not been told when the hearing would take place. It is alleged that while Rafael Mubarakshin was in pre-trial detention at Khamzinsky police station in Tashkent, law enforcement agents ill-treated him during interrogation. He reportedly confessed to the murder.

413. On 16 August 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent action jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture concerning the case of Marat Rakhmanov, Andrey Zolotykh, Semyon Kimalov and Ruslan Gudimovich who were sentenced to death following separate criminal trials for premeditated aggravated murder by Samarkand Regional Court. Their appeals to the Supreme Court had reportedly been rejected. It was further reported that they could be executed at any time. It was also alleged that Marak Rakhmanov had confessed to the murder only after he was tortured while in police custody. Furthermore, on 17 August 1999, whilst he was detained at Samarkand police station No. 6 awaiting the start of his trial, it is alleged he was severely beaten by police officers. According to the information received there had been no investigation by the authorities into these allegations.

414. On 24 August 2000 the Special Rapporteur transmitted another urgent appeal jointly with the Special Rapporteur on torture concerning the cases of Oybek Ruzmetov, Uygun Ruzmetov, Sardor Allayarov and Utkir Yusupov, referred to above. Renewed fears had been expressed that the accused could be at risk of torture or other forms of ill-treatment and summary, arbitrary or extrajudicial execution.

415. The Special Rapporteur transmitted the following allegations to the Government of Uzbekistan concerning alleged violations of the right to life.

416. It is reported that Rustam Norbaev reportedly died on 18 March 2000, as a result of torture while he was being detained in Milita district, Yakkagaba department, Kashkadarya province. Rustam Norbaev was reportedly arrested on 13 March 2000. It is alleged that the body had numerous signs of torture.

417. It is alleged that Memat Karimov Mamejtovich died while in detention in Navoi on 23 March 2000. It is reported that he had been arrested on suspicion of participating in alleged terrorist acts on 16 February in Tashkent and sentenced to 20 years of imprisonment with confiscation of possessions. According to the information received, his family was informed about his death by telegram. The relatives were reportedly permitted to recover the body of the victim, which was kept in the morgue near the detention camp. According to the source, the body displayed injuries suggesting that the victim had been tortured before he died. It is reported that his face was severely disfigured.

418. On 24 August 2000, the Government of Uzbekistan informed the Special Rapporteur that every Uzbek citizen is guaranteed judicial protection of his or her rights and freedoms and the right to appeal to the courts against unlawful actions by the authorities and officials. The Government pointed out that the judiciary in Uzbekistan operates independently of the legislative and executive branches and that the Uzbek law enforcement agencies operate within the framework of the Constitution of the Republic of Uzbekistan and in accordance with national law.

Venezuela

419. The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal on 27 January 2000 concerning death threats allegedly received by Solmari Madera from a police officer who reportedly searched her house and took money he found during his search of the premises.

420. The Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal on 21 March 2000 concerning death threats allegedly received by Eduardo Sojo Diaz, 16 years of age, and his mother. It was reported that they were told that if they testified against the murderers of Eduardo's brother, they would be killed. 421. According to the information received, Irwich Anderson Ramírez and Antonio Reyes were allegedly murdered in the neighbourhood of San Miguel, Caracas, on 16 September 1999, apparently by members of the Guardia Nacional. It is reported that members of the Guardia Nacional allegedly went to the homes of Irwich Anderson Ramírez and Antonio Reyes to investigate the death of Urwich Leonett, which, according to the source, had occurred a few days before. The National Police officers then allegedly proceeded to execute Irwich Anderson Ramírez and Antonio Reyes in the presence, according to the report, of the wife of Irwich Anderson Ramírez.

422. In a letter of 28 September 2000, the Government of Venezuela reported to the Special Rapporteur on the case of Hirwich Ramírez Cisneros and Marcelo Reyes Montilla. The Government informed the Special Rapporteur that, on the basis of the autopsy, it was determined that the cause of the death of Hirwich Ramírez Cisneros was a gunshot wound to the chest and that, in the case of Marcelo Reyes Montilla, death was the result of internal bleeding caused by a gunshot wound to the chest and abdomen. The Government also reports that the facts in the case are being investigated by the First Prosecutor's Office in the Office of the Attorney-General of the Caracas metropolitan area and by the Homicide Division of the Judicial Police Technical Unit, with two persons (whom the Government identifies in its reply) having been accused of aggravated homicide and the unlawful use of a weapon.

Yemen

423. On 14 June 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal concerning the case of Abdullah Mohammad Ahmad Shayban, who was convicted of murder and sentenced to death in 1997. It was reported that Abdullah Mohammad Ahmad Shayban appealed on the grounds that he had acted in self-defence, and the appeal court reduced his sentence to five years' imprisonment. However, the Supreme Court later overturned the appeal court's verdict and upheld the death penalty. It had been reported that following the decision of the Supreme Court, Abdullah Mohammad Ahmad Shayban could be at risk of imminent execution. In view of the fact that the two courts reached different verdicts based on the same evidence, the Special Rapporteur appealed to the Government of Yemen to order a stay of execution and to ensure that his case was thoroughly reviewed.

424. On 12 July 2000, the Special Rapporteur sent an urgent appeal concerning the case of Mohamed Omar Haji, a refugee from Somalia who was sentenced to death on 5 July 2000 by a court in Aden for having converted from Islam to Christianity. He was reportedly given till 12 July 2000 to recant and declare that he would return to Islam. There were also reports indicating that Mr. Haji was severely ill-treated and threatened by the police during interrogation at the al-Tawahi police station in Aden.

425. On 14 November 2000, the Government of Yemen informed the Special Rapporteur about the case of Mohamed Omar Haji, a Somali refugee who converted to Christianity. The Government pointed out that this act constitutes an offence under Yemeni law and legislation. Accordingly, the said person was arrested and referred for trial on charges of apostasy, but the Government decided instead to expel him from the territory of Yemen, a decision which was put into effect on 25 August 2000.

Yugoslavia

Communications

426. By letter dated on 2 August 2000 the Special Rapporteur requested the Government of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to extend her an invitation to visit the country. The Special Rapporteur informed the Government that the purpose of the visit would be to discuss issues falling under her mandate in connection with the situation in the province of Kosovo, with the aim of reaching an independent assessment of the reports and allegations received.

Zambia

428. On 12 May 2000, the Government transmitted information to the Special Rapporteur in response to an allegation sent by the Special Rapporteur in 1999 concerning the case of Kosamu Ngome. The Government reported that Kosamu Ngome was regrettably shot in self-defence whilst he was firing at police officers.

429. On 15 May 2000, the Government informed the Special Rapporteur about the Soweto market incident and the Limalunga village incident. With regard to the former, the Government stated that the crowd was dispersed by a police battalion, not armed paramilitary police officers. The Government explained that a battalion consists of 30 police officers armed only with long batons and tear gas canisters. There were no deaths reported. When the tear gas was used there was a stampede, in which Jane Mwamba was caught. The Government pointed out that the police officers were lawfully quelling a riot, as it is their mandate to preserve life, protect property and maintain law and order.

430. Concerning the Limalunga village incident, the Government reported that in the case of Kaluminiana Muyangwa Libuku, the police were exercising the internationally recognized principle of "hot pursuit" and in the process of apprehending him Mr. Libuku was shot in the stomach and died because of the poor medical facilities at the village. The Government conceded that one of the officers was careless in his use of a firearm. This person (identified by the Government in its response) had since been arrested, convicted of manslaughter and dismissed from the police service.

431. In the case of Josias Imasiku Mushala, the Government reported that he was a suspect in a burglary. His arm was dislocated whilst he was running away from lawful custody. The Government stressed that no batons or rifle butts were used in his apprehension.

432. With respect to Masiye Lowendo and Sisheho Sinaali, the Government reported that they were kept in police cells for 24 hours and then immediately transferred to Mongu remand prison.

433. In the case of Evans Kapaso, the Government pointed out that the officers concerned were immediately charged with gross discreditable conduct, were detained and tried by the Police Tribunal and convicted.

Zimbabwe

Urgent appeals

434. On 27 April 2000, the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal drawing the attention of the Government of Zimbabwe to serious concerns over the safety of opposition activists and supporters who had been intimidated and attacked in rural areas, allegedly by so-called “war veterans” and other supporters of the ruling party, the Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF), since February 2000. The Special Rapporteur also expressed her concern over continuing reports of attacks by former independence fighters and other supporters of ZANU-PF against commercial farmers and their employees. At least nine persons had reportedly been killed since the beginning of the hostilities. It was further reported that senior police officers had refused to comply with the High Court rulings of 17 March and 13 April that the “war veterans” and “squatters” should leave the farms they were occupying. There were reports that police had failed to intervene to prevent abuses or apprehend culprits at the scene. The Special Rapporteur urged the Government to ensure that the rule of law was upheld, in order not to encourage perpetrators to believe that they could commit human rights abuses with impunity. The Special Rapporteur also called on the Government to take immediate and effective measures to protect persons at risk from further violence and abuses.

Communications received

435. On 22 May 2000, the Government informed the Special Rapporteur about the occupation of farms by Zimbabwe’s war veterans. The Government stated that the “farm occupations” are in fact demonstrations on farms by the war veterans and did not target White-owned properties only. There had been no deliberate policy by the Government encouraging the demonstrations on the farms. The President of Zimbabwe called on both the war veterans and the farmers to desist from violence and from provoking each other in the course of the demonstrations. The Government stated that all incidents were investigated by the police.

Palestinian Authority

Urgent appeal

436. On 5 July 2000, the Special Rapporteur transmitted an urgent appeal to the Palestinian Authority concerning the case of Raji Saqir who had been sentenced to death for the murder of Ahlam Duqmaq on 3 July 2000. It was alleged that the proceedings before the State Security Court did not conform to international fair trial standards. The defendant was reportedly not given sufficient time to prepare his defence. It further appeared that he would not be entitled to appeal the verdict to a higher court. In view of these allegations, the Special Rapporteur urged the Palestinian Authority to order a stay of execution so that Raji Saqir’s case could be thoroughly reviewed.

Communications sent

437. The Special Rapporteur transmitted an allegation of violation of right to life on behalf of Khaled Mohamed Younis Al-Bahar, who was arrested on 25 May 2000 by the Preventive Security Service. It was reported that on 6 July 2000 Khaled Mohamed Younis Al-Bahar died at Dhaheria prison while in the custody of the Palestinian police. It was also alleged that the charges against him were unknown to the family and that no visitors were allowed to see him at any time.
